

ABSTRACT

A toy building construction set is disclosed which comprises a plurality of geometrically shaped thin panels. Each panel has loop and hook strips positioned at borders of the geometrically shaped thin panels, which can be used to attach the panels to one another. A number of different large scale structures can be made by children using these safe, light weight panels which simulate actual structures found in architecture..

5